Oil hovered near $120 a barrel on Friday, supported by tension between Iran and the West and hopes for a long-awaited Greek bailout deal.

U.S. stocks opened flat Friday, with investors reluctant to continue buying a day after the S&P posted its best daily gain in two weeks.

Gasoline prices jumped 0.9 percent in January, pushing overall consumer prices up at their fastest clip in four months and offering a reminder of the risks energy costs could pose to the economic recovery.
